

Architectural & Decorative Concrete

This is not your grandfather's concrete.

And you thought concrete only came in grey. Today, concrete is so versatile it is being used for driveways, pathways, patios, porches, flooring, pool decks and even countertops. Concrete can be stamped, molded, and colored as well as a host of surface treatments added for texture as well as traction.

Chandler Concrete offers over 40 integrally-mixed colors to choose from and a variety of patterns and textures. Integrally-mixed concrete means that the color is part of the concrete mix itself, so if a chip occurs the color continues to show. Stamp patterns can be used to resemble brick, stone, slate, flagstone, cobblestone, tile and even wood. Patterns and colors can be blended for more complex and striking designs to match other architectural elements in your project.

Not only is the usage limitless, architectural and decorative concrete is an economical choice compared to the products it mimics. And as always, you can rely on the fact that Chandler Concrete provides the highest quality concrete formulated specifically for its end use.
